To help you visually identify luxury vinyl planking with an integrated click-lock system, here is an example of the product format:

Why Drop-and-Lock / Angle-Drop Systems Are Easiest

- No heavy hammering: Traditional tongue-and-groove systems require a tapping block and a lot of force on every single short end. Drop-and-lock lets you align the long side at an angle, drop it flat, and tap lightly.
- Attached underlayment: Most beginner-friendly LVP lines come with pre-attached foam or cork backing, saving you an extra step and smoothing out minor subfloor imperfections. Reddit · r/HomeImprove… +3
- Simple cutting tools: You do not need a wet saw or power miter box; these planks can be scored with a sharp utility knife and snapped cleanly. Reddit · r/HomeImprove… +2

Tips for a Smooth Installation

- Check subfloor flatness: Even the best click-lock system can unclick or feel spongy if your subfloor has dips or high spots greater than 3/16 inch over a 10-foot span. Reddit · r/HomeImprove… +1
- Mix planks from different boxes: Open 3 or 4 cartons at a time and alternate planks to get a natural color variation across the room.
- Leave expansion gaps: Use 1/4-inch spacers against all walls and stationary objects so the floating floor can expand and contract safely.
